Installer Software: Where to Find Documentation (11/94)

======================================================================

Article Created: 16 July 1990
Article Reviewed/Updated: 07 November 1994

TOPIC -----------------------------------------------------------

I'm interested in creating an install program (perhaps in C or Pascal) that will automatically install software and utilities on Macintosh systems.

Is there an easy way to write installer scripts for applications?  It is becoming more time-consuming, as my Macintosh network has expanded, to update software on every machine.

Is there a way to produce installer scripts similar to what Apple offers with the operating system software -- without getting into Macintosh programming?

DISCUSSION ------------------------------------------------------

You can use Apple's Installer software.  Documentation on the software and its scripts is available on AppleLink. Use the following path to find it:

Developer Support
  Developer Services
    Tool Chest
      Developer Utilities
        Installer 3.4
          Installer.sit (StuffIt) 5/93
