Tech Info Library

NewtonMail: Description (11/93)

```
Revised:        11/17/93
Security:       Everyone
```

NewtonMail: Description (11/93)

==

Article Created: 17 November 1993

TOPIC ---

This article describes the NewtonMail communications service.

DISCUSSION --

NewtonMail is an electronic communications service for Newton users which allows the exchange of text messages and Newton documents.

With NewtonMail, Newton users can exchange text messages with other Newton users and with users of these online services: CompuServe, America Online, MCI Mail, AppleLink, SprintMail, EasyLink, and other online services accessible via the Internet. NewtonMail also enables the electronic exchange of Newton information such as notepad messages (including graphics), business cards, and calendar appointments between subscribers.

The NewtonMail service will be available 24 hours a day, 7 days a week, except for regularly scheduled periods of maintenance. NewtonMail is expected to be accessible from locations around the world, providing convenient local access to global communications networks.

To use NewtonMail, you need a Newton device, a Newton Fax Modem, a phone line and a NewtonMail account.

Copyright 1993, Apple Computer, Inc.

Tech Info Library Article Number:13988